

Ain't This Da Bomb

List of everyday things to be careful when doing:

1. Drinking a cup of hot coffee (burn hazard),
2. Eating donuts (choking hazard),
3. Cutting the crust off your PB & J (cutting hazard),
4. Driving a great big bomb around (boom hazard).

OK, this picture makes me sweat just looking at it. I bet the driver's jaw dropped faster than the gazillion-pound bomb he was toting around.

Operational Risk Management can be applied here. Example: Identify the hazards (big drop at the loading dock--forklift could drive over it); implement controls--post a safety observer, drive slower, put up a temporary obstacle to stop the forklift, just in case.

Easy stuff...let's use it and prevent things like this from happening.
