

Pride and Precaution

It has been one year since Sept. 11, 2001, and our nation's colors are appearing everywhere. They're on houses, cars, telephone poles ... you can even find flags in chalk pictures on the pavement.

This Sailor is raising the flag that draped over one of the surviving buildings of the World Trade Center during a special flag ceremony aboard USS Bataan.

However you choose to display the flag, just remember to use your head, and don't compromise safety when you do. Pull out a ladder when you need to get to a high place. Make sure the flag isn't near a heat source or mechanical equipment. If you're placing one on your car, make sure it isn't blocking your view of the road or distracting to other drivers.
